

Nonna's Phonics for Children Book I

by Nonna from FishEaters

First, teach your children the alphabet song, pointing to the letters on the second page of the book as you go along.

Then show your children the pictures and give them the names of the pictures.

Once they have the alphabet memorized and are familiar with the names of the pictures, focus on each individual letter, one at a time, only teaching your children what they can easily absorb in one lesson.

The next day, review past material, and move on to the next letter.

Throughout the day, quiz them – but make it fun. Pick up an object that begins with a letter they've learned and ask them what letter that object begins with. While driving down the street, ask them to look for things that begin with a certain letter. Repeat these games until the sounds of the letters are in their long-term memory.

Once the letter sounds are learned, move on to Nonna's Phonics For Children II for letter combinations and diphthongs.

Get your children books they can easily read, increasing in difficulty as they go along.

Read to your children, and model good reading habits to them.
